'To protect and improve the natural environment for present and future generations, taking into account the environmental, social and economic principles of sustainable development"

To whom it may concern,

I read the above statement from EPA with great interest. I have also met some of the EPA staff, through their efforts to deal with the situation re. Dump at Kerdiffstown. Without doubt, their goals and efforts are very honorable and their personnel are extremely nice to deal with. However, I find it non-sense that such an important organization with huge responsibility for the environment, does not have the relevant authority to act in situations that require strong action. I also understand that the Minister has stated that the EPA is not under the jurisdiction of his government department. This begs the question: "Who is the EPA answerable to?" Please excuse my lack of thorough knowledge on the matter, but I'm simply commenting on what I've observed over the last number of years.

A complete and fair review of the current structure of the EPA is urgently needed if we are to take the above statement seriously.

For the sake of our environment and also our future generations, please consider my comments.

Thank you.

Caroline Cullen
